The Association of Oldest Inhabitants Holds Its Reunion.

Every Member Has Lived Here Thirty-five Years or More-John Marbury, Jr., Re-elected President-Ex-Judge Cole Makes an Address

The annual meeting of the Association of the Oldest Inhabitants of the District was held yesterday at Carroll Institute Hall. On the Fourth of July, according to a long standing custom, the veteran citizens meet to celebrate Independence Day by special exercises prepared for the occasion and by the election of officers.

A pleasant feature of these gatherings is a banquet, at which interesting reminis-cences are given by way of after-dinner

Notwithstanding the intense heat of the day a considerable number of the members participated in the meeting. The association numbers at the present time 124, and each must be upward of fifty years of age, and must have resided in the District for thirty-five years.

The business meeting of the association convened at 10 o'clock. John Marbury, jr., president of the association, presided.

Several reports were submitted and the annual address of the president was listened to with interest. He stated that the weather was too warm for a long speech, but that he could not refrain from giving expression of his thanks to God that he was permitted once more to be present and greet his old friends of the associa-

Mr. Marbury referred to the fact that only one member of the association had died during the last month, and said he hoped that all present would be spared

After the short address of the president several new members were introduced, and business of a routine character was transacted. William Beron announced that yesterday was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the raising of the first flag over one of the public schools of the city by the society. Mr. Beron stated that he raised the flag with his own hands

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: John Marbury, jr., president; John W. Clark, Jacob Viehmeyer, William Beron, Noble D. Larner, S.

Thomas Brown, Joseph Prather, B. C.

Wright, C. H. Langley, P. M. Dubant,

A. H. Ragan, Frederick L. Moore, and Rudolph Eichhorn, vice presidents; J.

Richard Riggles, treasurer; Benjamin W.

Russ, recording secretary; Dr. J. T. Howard, corresponding secretary; J. A. Weinberger, marshal, and James Croggan,

The public exercises took place in the Overture, by Imperial Mandolin Club,

A. Grupe, jr., director, F. Reed, W. Galiher, C. Galiher, E. Hardstall, and E. Wittstatt; recitation, "Star-Spangled Ban-

AN ATTORNEY FOUND DEAD. Samuel J. Wallace's Lifeless Body

Discovered in His Room. The remains of Samuel J. Wallace, who floor of 506 Fifth Street northwest yesterday morning, will be taken from the morgue this morning and interred at Gienwood Cemetery. The deceased was at one time a well-known patent attorney past twenty-five years. The body was in a badly decomposed state, the result of the intense heat of the room in which it was found, which is directly beneath the tin roof. It is thought that Mr. Wallace probably died Tuesday afternoon of heart failure, resulting from sunstroke. His brother, Wallace, of 107 West 194th Street, New York City, was telegraphed to by Major J. McDowell Carrington, and replied that he was unable to reach Washington yesterday, but reguested that arangements for the funeral be made as soon as possible, Samuel J. Wallace was about sixty-five years of age, and an eccentric character. For a number of years he had lived more or less the life of a recluse. At one time be enjoyed a lucrative practice, but of late years his income is said to have been but meagre. He was last seen alive about 11 o'clock Tuesday morning, when Jane Carter, the colored woman who cleans the rooms of the building, found him asleep the first floor of the building. No investigation was made, however, until yesterday morning, when an odor was detected coming from the room occupied by Mr. was found dead in his room on the fourth | Wallace. George E. Harris, an attorney. of 1247 Ninth Street, was in Major Carrington's office when one of the tenants

He came to Washington about twentyfive years ago, and since then has been well known in patent law circles. Of late his failing powers have resulted in a failing off in practice, but only a few days ago he received a check for $75 from Warner, Moore & Co., of Richmond, Va., as a retainer in a patent case. He had an account at the Central National Bank,

In speaking of the old man yesterday Major Carrington said: "Although he lived the life of a recluse and was most rooms of the building, found him asleep in a chair in the rear of the building.

When she aroused him he complained of liness and went to his room. He was not seen Wednesday, and this fact was reported by the woman to Major J. Mc-

Half Holiday for Employes.

Major Carrington notified the police, and Policeman Nussbaum was sent to the house to investigate. He broke open the door leading to Wallace's room, and found the body lying on the floor between a table and a pile of books.

He was fully dressed and wore his spectacles, as though he had just laid down among his old friends, the books, for a quiet period of rest. An immediate report was made to Police Headquarters and the Coroner's office notified.

Deputy Coroner Glazebrook quickly reached the house and directed that the body be removed to the morgue.

Wallace was born in Tennessee, but spent the greater part of his life in Iowa. He came to Washington about twenty-five years ago, and since then has been as he hobbled into the witness box, and in a voice full of emotion he pathetically denounced the accusation against him as denounced the accusation against him as false. He said he had lived in Washington for nearly fifty years; that he had tried to be a good citizen, and that this was the first time the law had ever put its hand upon him. He explained that he was on his knees on the ground hunting a pouch containing is cents, all the money he had, when the two policemen arrested him. Judge Kimball dismissed the case.
